About the project

What is the Net0Manager project?

Net0Manager is an Erasmus+ project with the primary objective of enhancing the expertise and capabilities of EU managers in carbon management.

It aims to achieve this goal by introducing innovative methodologies to address Net-0 management, thereby fostering the development of comprehensive organizational strategies. Our focus is on elevating the proficiency of VET trainers and managers in carbon literacy training by introducing novel approaches and tools.

We aim at enabling the new generation of entrepreneurs to effectively contribute to making their businesses greener and more sustainable, by providing innovative ways to teach and implement net0management strategies in businesses in the EU and beyond!

What's new?

The project is about to come to an end, following two years of hard work, meetings, and a final event that just took place in Brussels, bringing together industry leaders and policymakers alike.

Here's a brief summary of what we have been working on

Net0Manager's Final Event

The Net0Manager consortium recently came together for its final project meeting, held as part of European Entrepreneurs CEA-PME's SME2B Business Forum Europe 2025, focused on "Net Zero in 2050... and how to get there". This marked an important milestone in the journey toward supporting SMEs in achieving Net Zero.

The Business Forum brought together industry leaders and policymakers from across Europe and proved to be highly productive. The agenda featured speakers from the European Commission, the business community, academia, and even African entrepreneurs, all sharing insights on how to achieve net-zero goals. Entrepreneurs presented their effective strategies, with one highlighting the benefits of taking the Net0Manager training, which helped optimize their operations and improve their services to clients.

Net0Manager's project coordinator, Kylene de Angelis, took the stage to present the project in its entirety, answering questions from the audience about micro-credentials and project results.

With this event concluded, Net0Manager is one step closer to the official end of its journey. Yet, its legacy will continue, as the consortium has been working relentlessly to ensure the project's impact and longevity far beyond its formal conclusion.

Net0Manager Policy Recommendations

The Net0Manager consortium has released its final Policy Paper, exploring how Europe's VET and adult learning systems can better respond to the urgent demand for sustainability competences in the green transition. The study highlights the evolving role of Net0Managers and the potential of micro-credentials as flexible, credible tools to bridge skills gaps. It outlines seven key recommendations for policymakers, educators, and businesses such as:

- Establish a European-wide recognition framework for micro-credentials
- Co-design curricula with sectoral stakeholders
- Invest in capacity-building for educators and institutions

And more.

The message is clear: achieving Europe's net-zero ambitions will not be possible through technology alone, but through people equipped with the right skills.

Final Transnational project meeting - Brussels, Belgium

The Net0Manager consortium recently came together for its final project meeting in Brussels, at the headquarter of European Entrepreneurs CEA-PME, marking an important milestone in the journey toward supporting SMEs in achieving Net Zero.

The meeting was highly productive, with partners reflecting on the strong progress made over the past months as well as on the final event held the day prior. Discussions focused mainly on preparing for the final project's outputs.

One of the key achievements highlighted was indeed the successful launch of the Net0Manager platform. Testing is now nearing completion, with valuable feedback from users ensuring that the final product will be both practical and impactful for SMEs across Europe on their journey to a net zero future.

With these last tasks well underway, the Net0Manager project is entering its concluding phase, ready to showcase its results and inspire businesses to embrace sustainable practices as part of their path toward Net Zero.

Net0Manager - What's next for the project?

While the project is coming to its official end, the Net0Manager consortium is far from finished. Through a growing network of ambassadors—entrepreneurs actively driving the green transition—a fully operational training toolkit, and a clear sustainability plan, Net0Manager will continue supporting SMEs in their journey toward greener, more sustainable operations while maintaining profitability.

The goal is to integrate the project's offerings into existing ecosystems and make the course freely available to all entrepreneurs who wish to meet their emissions targets while staying competitive and entering a new phase of their sustainability journey.

If you would like to become an ambassador, take the course, or stay updated on the project's next developments, reach out to us via LinkedIn or email—we will be happy to support you and your company!
